23 TO ALL PARTIES AND TO THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD HEREIN:

24 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that Defendant PASO OIL CO., INC., et al., by and through 25 their attorneys of record, hereby move the Court, in limine for an Order excluding any and all 26 evidence, references to evidence, testimony, or argument in any manner whatsoever, either
27 directly or indirectly, relating to the expert testimony of Brad Avrit, P.E., to the extent that his 28 testimony is speculative and not supported by evidence.

The Court is further requested to order counsel for all parties to inform each of their witnesses of this Order and of these instructions, to redact any mention of such matters from

1 each writing or document in the case, and to direct all witnesses not to make any reference to this
2 subject matter in any fashion.

3 This Motion is made upon the following grounds:

1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 1. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

4 This is a premises liability action to recover for damages arising from an alleged slip and 5 fall accident which occurred at Defendant’s service station in which 56-year old Plaintiff Carol
6 Jean Posner sustained bodily injuries on January 22, 2010. Although it was wet and rainy on that 7 date, Plaintiff admits that the moisture and wetness was “open and obvious.” Moreover, the 8 walking surface was objectively safe even when wet. In an attempt to establish liability, plaintiff
9 contends that she “believes that a petroleum product spill and the wet surface caused her (cane)
10 to slip.” (Emphasis Added.) No witness will offer testimony that they saw any foreign substance 11 or evidence of a foreign substance in or around where plaintiff fell.

12 Defendant contends that it did not breach a duty of care owed to Plaintiff because it had 13 no notice, whether actual or constructive, that an alleged unknown “mystery” substance was on 14 the ground where Plaintiff fell. Furthermore, Defendant contends that Plaintiff’s physical health 15 at the time of the incident was so poor, that her own underlying medical conditions contributed 16 to her slip and fall, and not an unknown spilled substance.

17 To date, no witness, including Brad Avrit, P.E., has identified any particular substance
18 which arguably caused or contributed to plaintiff’s fall. Rather, plaintiff relies on the so-called 19 expert opinions of Brad Avrit, P.E., that 1) because plaintiff fell, there must have been some 20 unknown and unidentified dangerous substance present; 2) Plaintiff’s cane must have slipped on 21 “oil or some other contaminant,” and 3) that had defendant had other inspection procedures in 22 place, it would have discovered the unknown and unidentified substance.

23 Such pure speculation and conjecture, not based upon admissible facts that there even 24 was some dangerous substance present, is insufficient to support an expert opinion. It is 25 prejudicial and must be excluded.

1 2. THIS COURT MAY EXCLUDE PREJUDICIAL EVIDENCE IN ADVANCE OF 2 TRIAL BY WAY OF AN IN LIMINE MOTION.

4 The court has the inherent power to grant a motion in limine to exclude “any kind of 5 evidence which could be objected to at trial, either as irrelevant or subject to discretionary
6 exclusion as unduly prejudicial”. (Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d
7 444; Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 200 Cal.App.3d 272, 288).

9 3. THIS COURT MAY PRECLUDE EVIDENCE WHERE THE PROBATIVE
10 VALUE IS SUBSTANTIALLY OUTWEIGHED BY THE DANGER OF UNDUE
11 PREJUDICE

13 Evidence Code Section 352 states that the court may exclude evidence if its probative
14 value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will “create substantial 15 danger of undue prejudice.” See People v. Cardenas, (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 897, 904; Mozzetti v. City
16 of Brisbane, (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 578.

17 In the present case, expert opinion testimony relating to or suggesting what “mystery” 18 substance caused or contributed to plaintiff’s fall would be purely speculative, as is discussed in 19 more detail below. Allowing such evidence, and an opinion that defendant should have 20 discovered it, would create unfair and significant prejudice to the plaintiff, and therefore should 21 be excluded.

23 4. THE COURT MAY EXCLUDE AN EXPERT’S OPINION WHERE BASED
24 UPON SPECULATION OR CONJECTURE (Evidence Code §801(b))

26 Evidence Code §801(b) states that an expert’s opinion must be based on matters 27 “perceived by or personally known to the witness or made known to him at or before the 28

1 hearing.” An expert may not base his or her opinion speculation or conjecture. (Hyatt v.
2 Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App. 3d 325; Long v. California-Western States Life Ins. Co.
3 (1955) 43 Cal.2d 871); See also Law Revision Commission Comment on Evidence Code Section 4 801 (speculative matters are not a proper basis for an expert's opinion).

5 Where an expert must work backward to reconstruct an accident, his opinion may be 6 inadmissible if based upon too many variables. Solis v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1980)
7 105 Cal. App. 3d 382, 389–90; see also, Francis v. Sauve (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 102, 114–15
8 (traffic reconstruction opinion testimony disallowed where too many variables).

9 An expert's opinion may also be excluded if it is not shown to be reliable. People v. Price
10 (1991) 1 Cal. 4th 324, 419–20); People v. Carter (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 737, 752).

11 In the present case, the defendant's expert is hindered by the same type of problems that 12 rendered the testimony in Solis and Francis inadmissible. The defense expert will attempt to 13 determine what alleged “mystery” substance may have been present, even though no one ever
14 saw any such substance, and there is no evidence that any foreign substance was even ever
15 present. There is not even any secondary evidence normally seen in slip cases, like skid marks 16 or residue on the plaintiff’s clothing.

17 Too much critical evidence is missing to allow this expert to render a reliable opinion, as 18 follows:

19 1. There were no witnesses to the accident or the events leading up to the accident.
20 Plaintiff neither looked to see if some foreign substance was present after she fell, nor instructed 21 anyone else to look to see if some substance was present.

22 2. Immediately after her fall, witness after witness arrived and neither saw neither a 23 foreign substance nor the remnants of a substance in the form of skid marks or other indicator 24 that something dangerous was present. The defendant inspected the area immediately after 25 plaintiff left the location and never saw or cleaned up a spill. The defendant has testified that he 26 tested the walking surface with his toe and found nothing slippery and no evidence of any slide 27 marks.

1 3. The plaintiff's expert's tests and analysis of the area occurred in May 2012 more
2 than two years after the alleged fall. Since no substance was ever found or identified, the expert
3 is guessing that "oil or some other contaminant" must have been present. This is totally 4 speculative.

5 4. The plaintiff's expert's conclusion that defendant knew or should have known of 6 a substance which has never been identified is pure conjecture.

7 As a result, Mr. Avrit's opinions and conclusions are mere speculation. (Lockheed
8 Litigation Cases, supra, 115 Cal.App.4th at p. 564 [the matter relied on by an expert must 9 provide a reasonable basis for his opinion, and opinions based on speculation or conjecture are 10 not admissible]; Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Zuckerman (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1113, [an 11 expert cannot base his opinions on assumptions that are not supported by the record, or upon 12 information that is not reasonably relied upon by other experts]; Leslie G. v. Perry & Associates
13 (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 472, 487 [a possible cause of an injury only becomes probable when, in 14 the absence of other reasonable causal explanations, it becomes more likely than not that the 15 injury was a result of its action]; Jennings v. Palomar Pomerado Health Systems, Inc. (2003) 114
16 Cal.App.4th 1108, 1118 [a theoretical possibility of causation cannot support an expert's 17 conclusion that the act in question was the cause of the injury].)

18 Based upon the foregoing, it is unclear how the defense expert can render an opinion on 19 this crucial evidence based upon anything other than conjecture, speculation and simple
20 guesswork. As such, it is again requested that the Court exclude any testimony of defendant's 21 expert relating to whether an unknown "mystery" substance was present and somehow caused or 22 contributed to plaintiff's fall.

1 5. CONTROLLING CASE LAW PROHIBITS THE PRECISE SPECULATION
2 OFFERED BY PLAINTIFF’S EXPERT IN THIS CASE.

4 Plaintiff’s expert opinion is based upon the premise that from the alleged slip and fall
5 alone it can be inferred that it was more probable than not that a slippery substance was present
6 on and otherwise safe walking surface. In essence, plaintiff’s expert is attempting to apply the 7 doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to this case when the California Supreme Court has held that res ipsa
8 loquitur does not apply to slip and fall cases. (Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4
9 Cal. 4th 820, 826-28, “Brown”.)

10 In rejecting a presumption of negligence, the court explained:

11 “Experience teaches that slip and falls are not so likely to be the result of negligence as to 12 justify a presumption to that effect. As Prosser and Keeton explain, ‘there are many accidents
13 which, as a matter of common knowledge, occur frequently enough without anyone’s fault
14 [A] n ordinary slip and fall . . . will not in [itself] justify the conclusion that negligence is the 15 most likely explanation; and to such events res ipsa loquitur does not apply.’ (Prosser & Keeton, 16 Torts (5th Ed. 1984) § 39. P. 246.) This is true even when the fall is associated with a slippery
17 object, because objects too often appear on floors without sufficient explanation. For this reason,
18 ‘something slippery on the floor affords no res ipsa case against the owner of the premises,
19 unless it is shown to have been there long enough so that he should have discovered it and 20 *removed it.’ (Id., at pp. 255-56.)” (Brown, supra 4 Cal.App.4th at pp. 826; emphasis added.)*

21 Indeed, it is a basic fact of life that people are often injured in the absence of negligence.
22 [N]ot every accident that occurs gives rise to a cause of action upon which the party injured may 23 recover damages from someone. Thousands of accidents occur every day for which no one is 24 liable in damages, and often no one is to blame, not even the ones who are injured. (Holcombe v.
25 Burns (1960) 183 Cal.App.2d 811, 815 (Citations omitted.)) Inasmuch as there is no evidence of 26 a slippery substance on the brushed concrete where plaintiff fell, and no evidence that the 27 premises was in a “dangerous condition,” plaintiff should not be permitted to accomplish an 28

1 inference of negligence by expert testimony. Allowing such testimony would, in essence,
2 overrule the California Supreme Court.

4 6. CONTROLLING AUTHORITY FROM THIS DISTRICT ESTABLISHES THAT
5 CONJECTURE THAT THE GROUND WAS TOO SLIPPERY IS MERE
6 SPECULATION AND LEGALLY INSUFFICIENT TO BASE AN EXPERT’S
7 OPINION.

9 The case of Buehler v. Alpha Beta Co. (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 729 from this district
10 should control the outcome of this motion. The plaintiff in Buehler alleged that her slip and fall 11 in the defendant’s store was caused by an inappropriately slippery floor, due to either an 12 unknown substance on the floor or improper waxing of the floor. (Id. at 733.) As in our case, 13 Plaintiff did not see anything on the floor to cause her to slip and did not know the cause. (Id. at 14 734.) The Buehler court affirmed a summary judgment in favor of the defendant on the ground 15 that the defendant had established a prima facie defense of no liability based on the lack of 16 evidence of any slippery or otherwise defective condition. (Id. at 731-32.) The court held that 17 “[c]onjecture that the floor might have been too slippery at the location where appellant
18 happened to fall is mere speculation which is legally insufficient” (Id. at 734; emphasis 19 added.)

20 Moreover, the Buehler court was mainly concerned that there was a lack of evidence that 21 the floor was “too slippery” where plaintiff fell, that is, that a dangerous condition even existed.
22 Although the plaintiff contended that there must have been some substance, either too much wax 23 or some unknown substance, the court found no substantial evidence of wax or any other 24 substance creating a dangerous condition. (Buehler v. Alpha Beta Co., supra, 224 Cal.App.3d 25 729, 734.)

26 Vaughn v. Montgomery Ward & Co. (1950) 95 Cal.App.2d 553, came to the same
27 conclusion. There, the only evidence the Vaughn plaintiff presented was that she slipped and fell 28

1 in defendant's store injuring her. As in the present case, plaintiff claimed that her fall was 2 caused by an oily, slippery, liquid substance which the defendant had negligently allowed to 3 remain on the floor. (Id. at 553-54.) The court explained that in most reported slip and fall
4 cases, the plaintiff had offered evidence proving the existence of a dangerous condition created
5 by the business owner or proof of some foreign substance on the floor. (Id. at 556.)

6 The Vaughn plaintiff's statement that his foot felt an oily and slippery substance did not 7 constitute substantial evidence of a dangerous condition essential to maintaining an action for 8 negligence or premises liability. (Id. at 557.)

9 In this case, the plaintiff merely speculates that something must have been on the ground,
10 contributing to her fall. "Conjecture that the floor might have been too slippery at the location
11 where appellant happened to fall is mere speculation which is legally insufficient. . . ." (Buehler
12 v. Alpha Beta Co., supra, 224 Cal.App.3d 729, 734 (emphasis added).)

13 Under both Buehler and Vaughn, plaintiff's expert's contention that she must have 14 stepped on something can be no more than conjecture that the ground may have been "too 15 slippery," that is, that an unreasonably dangerous condition existed.

16
17 7. CONCLUSION.

18
19 Based on the foregoing, the Defendant respectfully request that this Court exclude any 20 and all evidence, or mention of evidence referring to the testimony of Brad Avrit, P.E. which 21 infers that "oil or some other contaminant" was present, and that defendant knew or should have 22 known of such "mystery" substance.

23 Since there can be no probative value to such evidence, especially when weighed in 24 comparison to the serious, obvious prejudice and confusion such evidence will create if known to 25 jurors, it must be excluded.
