

What should I do if I am pulled over by a police officer on suspicion of DUI in Orange County? – California Vehicle Code 23152

Los Angeles DUI Attorney

Let's say you've been drinking a few drinks at the bar and you decide to drive home. You feel fine, a little buzzed, but definitely not drunk. However, the cops end up flashing their sirens and pulling you over. What should you do now? The most important thing you can do when pulled over by a police officer for any stop is to not speak to the police. Of course, you must give your name and hand over your driver's license, registration and proof of insurance.

In the case of a police officer conducting a DUI stop, you should never speak or give any information to the police officer. Most importantly, if you had something to drink and you are driving, you should never tell the police officer which bar or party you came from or how much alcohol you consumed. Nothing you divulge will help you avoid being arrested. In fact, the more information you tell them, the more evidence the prosecution will have to convict you of driving under the influence.
