If you are seeking bankruptcy protection, you are probably looking for every way you can find to save money. Many individuals consider filing their case on their own. This can be intimidating if you are not familiar with the bankruptcy laws and court rules. Your other options are to hire a bankruptcy petition preparer or an attorney.

A bankruptcy petition preparer is somebody who takes the financial information you provide to them and prepares your petition for filing. Once this is done, the petition preparer's work is done. A petition preparer is not allowed under the law to provide you with legal advice. Thus, once your case is filed, you are on your own.

If you are not familiar with bankruptcy laws or you would prefer to have somebody with you every step of the way through your case, you should consider hiring a bankruptcy lawyer. An attorney will not only handle preparing your petition, but he/she will attend any hearings or meetings with you and give you legal advice throughout your case. An experienced bankruptcy attorney has the training to anticipate any issues that may arise and assist you in handling them.

If you are considering filing for bankruptcy protection, you should carefully consider all of your available options and pick the one that best suits your individual circumstances.
