

Time and Money Saving Tips for Depositions

When you are hiring a court reporter, you will want to make sure that you are making a cost-effective and time-saving decision. Depositions take a lot of time and money to organize, and skimping on them will not get you anywhere. To ensure the best quality court reporting services, you will want to find a total solution provider that can take care of all of your needs at once—and save you time and money as well.

Start By Hiring a Court Reporting Firm:

There are several ways that you can save money when you are looking for court reporting services and the first and most important of these is to hire a full service court reporting firm to handle all of your legal needs. If you only hire a court reporter and end up needing an interpreter or a video conference, you are going to end up spending a lot of extra money and time making arrangements hiring multiple independent service providers. Once you have hired a quality court reporting firm, you will want to establish a strong relationship with them. If you use the same firm for all of your depositions, they will become more familiar with your needs and be able to anticipate them. Also, if you encourage your opposing counsel to use the same court reporters, you can save on the cost of an extra reporter and make the deposition process more streamlined.

Services that a Quality Court Reporting Firm Will Offer:

The court reporting firm that you hire should have a full complement of services for their clients. For one thing, any reputable firm should offer you the latest litigation support technology to give clients several convenient ways to access case related materials. An eTranscript will give you a convenient way to view your files anywhere you have Internet access, but the best firms will also offer you a pocket transcript and an online repository. A pocket transcript is a USB device loaded with your case files, which you can use in any computer so that even if your own computer crashes, you'll still have your case files on hand. The online repository stores all of your important case documents in an easy-to-access location for authorized users so that no matter where you go, you can get to your files. All of these features save you the time and money it takes to mail your transcript and if you don't need a physical copy, you can cut printing costs as well.

The court reporting firm should also be able to schedule depositions for you anywhere you need and provide fully staffed offices for your logistical support. With their easy scheduling and support systems, firms save you the hassle of making arrangements and get the technical assistance that you will need to make your depositions run smoothly.

Court Reporting Services Balance Quality and Cost:

Most of all, the best court reporting services will have an even balance between cost-effectiveness and superiority of service. Your transcript production quality is not something you want to take chances with and you will want to make sure that you get the best deal without sacrificing the integrity of your important legal document. By hiring a court reporting firm to act as your total solution provider, you can ensure that you are getting the most complete services on the market at a better cost than if you contracted individually.
