Am I Eligible to File a Yasmin or Yaz Lawsuit?

Women who used the birth control pills Yaz or Yasmin and suffered blood clots or other side effects may be eligible to file a lawsuit and receive compensation for their injuries. More than 10,000 Yasmin and Yaz lawsuits have already been filed on behalf of women who allege that they suffered serious and potentially deadly side effects as a result of these birth control drugs.

Research has shown that Yaz and Yasmin may cause an increased risk of blood clots compared to other birth control pills. According to a pair of studies published by the British Medical Journal, women taking Yaz or Yasmin are twice as likely to suffer blood clots as those who are taking another brand of birth control. This increased blood clot risk could leave Yaz and Yasmin users at risk of other side effects, including deep vein thrombosis (DVT), pulmonary embolism, heart attack and stroke.

If you or a loved one used Yaz or Yasmin and suffered blood clots or other side effects, you may be eligible to file a lawsuit. Talking with a Yasmin and Yaz lawyer is the first step towards finding out whether you qualify to take legal action.
