

ANY OF THESE EXCUSES SOUND FAMILIAR?!

By: Sabrina Winters, Attorney at Law, PLLC

If you don't have a written Estate Plan do any of the justifications below sound like ones you may have used?

1. I have no idea who to call, why bother.
2. I don't want to talk about my own death or illness; my family will just figure it out.
3. I don't know the choices that I would make so I will wait until I figure it out before I talk to someone.
4. I don't know who I want to care for my children; I'll let my family decide.
5. I heard it was so expensive that I don't have the money to spend right now.
6. I don't even know what an Estate Plan really is and why I need one. I don't have enough money to even need to worry about it.
7. I am never going to go into a nursing home or get ill.

If any of the justifications for not having a written Estate Plan above sound familiar, you
