

National Labor Relations Board Proposes Rule Requiring Posting of Employee Rights

December 21, 2010 by Adam Santucci

On December 21, 2010, the National Labor Relations Board \("Board"\) issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking \(pdf\), which, if finalized, would require employers to notify employees of their rights under the National Labor Relations Act ("Act"). If you would like to review the Board's News Release regarding the proposed rule, please click here \(pdf\).

The proposed rule would apply to private sector employers covered by the Act, and would require posting of the notice were workplace notices are typically posted. The rule would require electronic posting of the notice if the employer typically posts workplace notices electronically.

Employers interesting in commenting on the proposed rule may do so by following the instructions in the proposed rule. All employers covered by the Act should be sure to stay tuned to ensure compliance, if the proposed rule is finalized.

© 2010 McNees Wallace & Nurick LLC

This document is presented with the understanding that the publisher does not render specific legal, accounting or other professional service to the reader. Due to the rapidly changing nature of the law, information contained in this publication may become outdated. Anyone using this material must always research original sources of authority and update this information to ensure accuracy and applicability to specific legal matters. In no event will the authors, the reviewers or the publisher be liable for any damage, whether direct, indirect or consequential, claimed to result from the use of this material.