Accident Database & Synopses

The NTSB aviation accident database contains information from 1962 and later about civil aviation accidents and selected incidents within the United States, its territories and possessions, and in international waters. Generally, a preliminary report is available online within a few days of an accident. Factual information is added when available, and when the investigation is completed, the preliminary report is replaced with a final description of the accident and its probable cause. Full narrative descriptions may not be available for dates before 1993, cases under revision, or where NTSB did not have primary investigative responsibility.

The following information is available:

- Database Query - interactive search capability for the NTSB database, updated daily; see the general instructions before using the form for the first time.
- Monthly lists - accidents sorted by date, updated daily.
- Investigations Nearing Completion - List of investigations with estimated dates of publishing probable cause.
- Downloadable datasets - one complete dataset for each year beginning from 1982, updated monthly in Microsoft Access 95 MDB format; this site also provides weekly "change" updates and complete documentation.
- GILS record - complete description of the accident database, including definition of "accident" and "incident".
- FAA incident database - complete information about incidents, including those not investigated by NTSB, is provided by the Federal Aviation Administration.
- Data & Information Products - lists other sources of information about aviation accidents, including publications, dockets, and press releases

The Federal Aviation Administration Enforcement Information System (EIS) database contains current and historical data on FAA enforcement actions against airlines, pilots, mechanics and their designees. The data include enforcement actions from 1999 to September 2007.

All types of planes are included: passenger jets, cargo planes, helicopters, corporate/executive planes, military aircraft and foreign air carriers that are traveling in the United States.

The data include enforcement actions against a variety of aviation personnel: commercial and private planes, student pilots, flight radio operators and navigators, mechanics, control tower operators, flight instructors and foreign airmen.

Violation categories include: maintenance, hazardous materials, security, medical, drug testing, flight operations, aircraft alterations, training and near mid-air collisions.

- Story No. 15476: The Federal Aviation Administration has failed to control hazardous materials violations by air carriers. Hazardous cargo often travels aboard commercial as well as cargo carriers.
- Story No. 15148: USA Today finds that half of the world's passenger jets contain electrical wire insulation that is considered unsafe by military and other wiring experts. Damaged wire insulation has led to fires and electrical equipment failure for years and may have played a role in two unsolved crashes: the recent Swissair Flight 111 accident off the coast of Nova Scotia and the explosion of TWA Flight 800 near Long Island in 1996.
