Two men working on an electrical panel at Roger Dunn Golf Shops on Village Way in Santa Ana were injured in an explosion, according to a news report.

Santa Ana Fire Department officials said that the two men were in the electrical room at the store working on a panel when a small explosion occurred, knocking them back and causing burn injuries to their faces and heads. Shop employees were working at the time of the explosion, but none of the employees were injured.

Firefighters put out the fire in about 15 minutes, and the two workers were taken to a local hospital for treatment. Southern California Edison was called to inspect the panel for safety; the cause of the fire is still under investigation.
