

CHOOSING THE RIGHT DUI DEFENSE ATTORNEY

In the state of California, DUI (driving under the influence) is a criminal offense that involves serious legal consequences. The mistake that too many people make after being arrested for DUI is not taking the situation seriously enough. When you've been charged with DUI, you need to be aware that a conviction can lead to life altering legal consequences such as fines, jail time, and probation, and suspension of your California drivers license. With the legal consequences being so great, even for a first time DUI offender, it's never in your best interest to underestimate the consequences of a DUI charge. Instead, people who have been charged with DUI need to place every effort into their defense, and that process begins with hiring the right DUI Defense Attorney.

DUI is defined as driving while under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol; or driving with a blood alcohol concentration that is 0.08% or higher. Once you've been arrested for DUI, you may be charged with two criminal offenses. The first offense is driving while impaired by drugs and/or alcohol. This offense is based on your inability to properly operate a motor vehicle due to being impaired. The second offense, known as the per se offense, involves your blood alcohol concentration (BAC).
