

Drug Injury Watch: Third Boles vs. Merck Fosamax Trial In September 2012 Involves Only The Damages Amount Aspect

Brief History Of This ONJ / Jaw Lawsuit: First, Mistrial; Second, Jury Verdict For Plaintiff But Award Reduced By Judge

(Posted by Tom Lamb at www.DrugInjuryWatch.com on September 6, 2012)

SUMMARY: Soon after a October 2010 reduction of the jury's $8 million award by Judge Joseph Keenan following the second trial of the Boles v. Merck Fosamax femur fracture lawsuit, the attorneys for Shirley Boles informed the court that they would prefer to have a retrial on the damages aspect of the lawsuit as opposed to accepting the $1.5 million.

And that set the stage for "Boles III", as some observers are referring to this third Boles v. Merck trial which is scheduled to start in mid-September 2012.
