If you are a foreign resident engaged to a U.S. citizen and you have obtained a K1 Visa to enter the U.S., there are legal avenues to bring your children with you.

Specifically, a K2 Visa allows the child of a K1 Visa holder to enter the country while awaiting the availability of an immigrant visa or resident status.

If you hold a K1 Visa, your child might qualify for a K2 Visa if:

*He or she is less than 21 years old;

*He or she is your unmarried child; and

*He or she wants to immigrate lawfully to the U.S.

*By obtaining a K2 Visa, your child will be able to:

*Reside in the U.S. with your family while awaiting your marriage;

*Apply for employment authorization using applicable work authorization; and/or

*Study in U.S. schools, colleges or universities.
