An 8-year-old girl was seriously injured after she was thrown from a minivan after it collided with another car in Fountain Valley, according to a news report.

Fountain Valley police said that the two-car crash happened at the intersection of Warner and Bushard avenues when a Toyota Camry traveling west on Warner collided with a Ford Aerostar minivan that was going south on Bushard. Investigators said it appears one of the vehicles ran a red light.

The minivan was hit on the side and the girl was apparently ejected through a side window; she was taken to UCI Medical Center in Orange with traumatic injuries. Two other children and their parents were also in the minivan; the children were taken to the hospital for observation. Two adults in the Camry were also taken to the hospital with unknown injuries.
