AALACHO MUSIC, LLC'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO QUASH SUBPOENA- 1

Case No. CV03-2358L

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE

AALACHO MUSIC, LLC, a Washington limited liability company,

Plaintiff,

VS.

DEEP DISH RECORDS, INC., a District of Columbia corporation, and YOSHITOSHI SHOP, L.L.C., a limited liability company, Defendants.

NO. CV03-2358L

AALACHO MUSIC, LLC'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO OUASH SUBPOENA

I. Introduction

Without any factual support or evidence, Defendants Deep Dish Records, Inc. and Yoshitoshi Shop, L.L.C. (together, "Defendants") have alleged an unclean hands defense to their copyright infringement. They now seek to depose counsel for Aalacho Music, LLC ("Aalacho") ostensibly in hopes of obtaining testimony that counsel led Global Underground, Ltd. ("Global") to believe Global had a license to exploit Aalacho's copyrighted material. Defendants argue that Global is beyond the subpoena power of the Court; but Defendants' counsel has already arranged to take Global's deposition, and Global has a New York office upon which Defendants effected service of a subpoena.

Moreover, Global provided a declaration under the penalty of perjury unequivocally testifying that neither Aalacho nor its counsel granted Global any license. Rather, Global relied on a license Defendants purportedly granted it. Defendants' request to depose Aalacho's trial counsel is not for the purpose of obtaining evidence, but is an attempt to harass and cause prejudice to Aalacho. Accordingly, Defendants' request to depose counsel for Aalacho is improper, the Subpoena should be quashed, and Aalacho should be awarded its fees incurred in this matter.

II. DISCUSSION

A. DEFENDANTS WRONGLY REPRESENT THAT GLOBAL IS BEYOND THE SUBPOENA POWER OF THE COURT

Defendants argue that they cannot obtain discovery from Global. Initially Defendants argued that Global is beyond the subpoena power of the Court. (Motion to Compel, p. 4.) Having served a subpoena on Global in its New York office the day after filing their Motion to Compel, Defendants now argue that they may not be able to obtain the requisite documents because "Global has advised that it has no responsive documents in the U.S., and no U.S. agent competent to testify on the topics noted in the Rule 30(b)(6) notice." (Reply, p. 2.) Defendants additionally claim that while Mr. Colin Tierney (Managing Director of Global) may agree to a telephonic or video deposition, "[Mr. Tierney] has yet to respond to communications seeking to arrange a date for the deposition." (Reply, p. 2.) Defendants' arguments have no basis in law or fact.

First, from a factual standpoint, Global (through its director, Colin Tierney) agreed to make itself available for a telephone or a video deposition at the convenience of Defendants, and further agreed to produce documents in advance of that deposition. (See Balasubramani Decl., Ex. A (e-mail from Colin Tierney to counsel for all parties: "I can confirm that the 9th [of September] will be fine with me . . . I will make sure that you both have all documentation . . . by then."). 1) Global has already produced correspondence between Defendants and itself, which Defendants failed to produce in Second, from a legal standpoint, courts routinely compel the production of documents subpoenaed from a domestic subsidiary of a foreign corporation, see, e.g., Gerling Int'l Ins. Co. v. Comm'r of Internal Revenue, 839 F.2d 131, 140-41 (3d Cir.

1988), or documents subpoenaed from a domestic branch of a foreign corporation. See Dietrich v. Bauer, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11729 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2000) (ordering branch). In the Dietrich case, the existence of a bank branch in the United States non-party to produce documents held abroad based on jurisdiction conferred by domestic supported the assertion of jurisdiction over the foreign entity, and ultimately entitled the party seeking discovery to obtain it from the foreign entity. In the present case, Global, a U.K. entity, has a New York office—on which Defendants were able to effect service. As in Dietrich, the fact that Global has a New York office allows a United States District Court to assert jurisdiction over Global, and to compel production of documents through Global's New York office. On the other hand, if Global (New York) is an entity separate from Global (U.K.), a court may order production of documents from Global (New York) based on the fact that Global (New York) "controls" the documents "in possession of [a] expansive definition of "control" under Rule 45); see also United States v. International Union of Petroleum and Indus. Workers, AFL-CIO, 870 F.2d 1450, 1452 (9th Cir. 1989) corporation owns or wholly controls."). In either event, the law allows for compulsion of the documents from Global's New York office even if those documents are not physically parent, subsidiary, or sister corporate entity." Gerling, 839 F.2d at 140-41 (noting

B. DEFENDANTS DO NOT, AND CANNOT, PROFFER ANY RELEVANT EVIDENCE THEY HOPE TO OBTAIN FROM AALACHO'S COUNSEL

Defendants fail to proffer even one iota of evidence they hope to obtain from Aalacho's counsel. Defendants merely continue to press forward with their fishing expedition in an effort to disrupt Aalacho's relationship with its counsel and prejudice Aalacho.

Defendants claim "discovery from Global is not a substitute for the deposition" of Aalacho's counsel. (Reply, p. 2.) However, the relevant question, if any, is the impression formed by Global–i.e., whether Global was led to believe by Aalacho that they could exploit the Track. Defendants themselves acknowledge this in their reply/opposition, alleging "[Aalacho's representations] would have misled Global into believing its use was authorized" (Reply, p. 4 (emphasis added).) Thus, the key testimony would come from Global (regarding its belief) and not from Aalacho's counsel. Moreover, Global's testimony unequivocally indicates Aalacho never represented to Global that Global had Aalacho's permission to utilize the Track. Aalacho attaches a declaration signed by Colin Tierney attesting that: (1) Global did not rely on any representations by Aalacho in exploiting the Track; and (2) Global relied solely on the representations of the Deep Dish Defendants in exploiting the Track. (See Tierney Decl. ¶ 21 & 22.) In the face of this evidence, no testimony from Aalacho's counsel could validate Defendants' unclean hands argument.

C. AALACHO IS ENTITLED TO ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES IN DEFENDING AGAINST THE SUBPOENA

Rule 45 allows for the liberal issuance of a subpoena, but imposes a duty on a party issuing a subpoena "to take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on the person subject to the subpoena." FED. R. CIV. P. 45(C)(1). "Abuse of this liberal authority is constrained by Civil Rule 45(c), which subjects attorneys to a 'sword of Damocles' when they overreach." Polo Bldg Group, Inc. v. Rakita (In re Shubov), 253 B.R. 540, 547 (Bankr. (9th Cir.) 2000) (citing 9A WRIGHT & MILLER § 2463 (2d ed.

AALACHO MUSIC, LLC'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO QUASH SUBPOENA- 4

1995)). A breach of this duty is enforced by exposure to a sanction that includes, but is not limited to, a reasonable attorney's fee. FED. R. CIV. P. 45(C)(1). In this instance, Defendants ignored the principle that "the basic idea of attacking an opponent by dragging his or her attorney into the fray is offensive." In re Duque, 154 B.R. 93, 96 (Bankr. D. Fla. 1993). Defendants failed to undertake any efforts to minimize prejudice to Aalacho, and simply issued the subpoena to counsel for Aalacho, without verifying whether Global was under the subpoena power of the Court or would otherwise provide testimony. Under these circumstances, an award of attorney's fees is appropriate.

III. CONCLUSION

As set forth herein, Defendants' request to depose Aalacho's counsel is nothing more than a fishing expedition, and a transparent attempt to interfere with Aalacho's working relationship with its counsel. Defendants are able to, and should, obtain testimony from Global. Moreover, any testimony procured from Aalacho's counsel could not contradict Global's own testimony that it did not rely on Aalacho's representations in utilizing the Track. For the foregoing reasons, the subpoena issued to Aalacho's counsel should be quashed, and Aalacho should be awarded its fees for this matter.
