

University Of Pennsylvania Survey – Masters Degree In FDA Regulation

Friday, September 09, 2011

In partnership with the FDA, the University of Pennsylvania (where some of us went) is developing a Master's degree program in Regulatory Science. Since a lot of our readers are interested in FDA issues, either from a regulatory or from a litigation standpoint, we've been asked to help the University out in designing this program.

The University has put together a survey, which can be accessed here. This survey is directed at finding out what types of subjects and what type of structure (daytime, evening, online) such a masters program might include. The survey's really short (we promise). It genuinely takes less than five minutes to complete. It's either anonymous or not, at the participant's choice.

Anyway, since we thought this kind of program would be of interest to our readers, we thought we'd help (some of ours) alma mater out and bring it to your attention. What you do with it is up to you.
