Most airlines allow frequent flyer members to leave their unused miles in their will. Someone you love could benefit from the gift of miles and may be able to take the trip of a lifetime, or be able to commute back and forth to college.

Your estate planning documents can be as detailed or as vague as you wish. Some people like to maintain control of every asset and do not want to let any asset go to waste. You can give to more of your loved ones if you have a creative estate plan. If you want to leave your frequent flyer miles to a love one, you should include the name of the airline(s) in which you have miles, your frequent flyer number, and a password for internet account access if you have one. This information enables the beneficiary to make the transfer in ownership.
