Re: Last Will and Testament and Property

Dear

Owners of real property (land) and personal property (money, furniture, bank accounts, cars, personal effects, etc.) have the privilege to select those who will receive these items upon death. If an owner does not have a Will she/he loses that privilege and the law decides. More importantly, as any one who has been through it with family or friends, the time and money for probating is much more expensive and time consuming without a Will. Changes in one's marital status, financial status and family often will require some changes to an existing Will. Our office records indicate that you have not prepared a recent Will.

Please find enclosed a brochure dealing with Wills and Estate Planning. I will be happy to discuss this matter further with you by free in-office consultation by appointment.

Best Regards,

Kenneth Vercammen
