Labor Day and Visitation

With Labor Day approaching it is a good time to reflect on the contributions and achievements of / Those efforts are the reason we celebrate Labor Day , and have since it became a Federal holiday in Labor Day is also a good reminder for paying attention to v isitation issues. It is extremely comm agreements that I prepare that the non-custodial parent receive additional time, more than the weekends that seem “standard.” I often include that the weekend extends through the Monday h gives that parent additional time with the child of uninterrupted v isitation.

In fact, I have a schedule of all Federal and State Holidays and routinely have this specifically add custody /v isitation agreements. There is almost one Monday holiday in every month. These time provide both parents additional welcomed time with the child and perhaps, even, a much needed l attention to the details when ironing out the specifics in a custody /v isitation agreement and make the other holidays and not just the “big” ones.
