

Can I Get My Probation Period Adjusted in Arizona?

By: Jeremy Geigle, Attorney at Law
JacksonWhite, P.C.

The short answer to that question is yes, you can get the period of your probation adjusted in Arizona. However, there are some guidelines described by ARS 13-924, which states that “the court may adjust the period of a . . . supervised probation on the recommendation of an adult probation officer for earned time credit.”

Earned time credit equates to 20 days of probation adjustment for every 30 days that the probationer does the following:

1. Is current on all payments ordered by the court,
2. Is current on court ordered community service,
3. Shows positive progression towards the goals and treatments described in their case plan.

However, earned time credit can be taken away if it is found that the probationer has violated the terms of their probation. In addition, any probationer that is on probation for a class 2 or 3 felony, on lifetime probation, or on probation exclusively for a misdemeanor does not apply.
