

Who Can Apply for a Lawsuit Cash Advance?

Who can apply for a lawsuit cash advance?

Any plaintiff with a pending personal injury lawsuit. Basically all you need is to have already filed a lawsuit with an attorney. Once you have completed this you are eligible to apply for a lawsuit cash advance or a lawsuit loan as they are sometimes called. However, this is not a loan.

Why a lawsuit cash advance is NOT a loan:

The main reason that this type of financing is not a loan is because you are not locked into repaying the advanced amount if you do not settle your case successfully – so if you do not win, there is nothing to repay. A traditional loan requires you to repay the principal no matter what.

Another main difference between a lawsuit cash advance and a loan is that there are no monthly repayments. The interest that accrues is only payable once you have won the case. This may be several years from now and in the meantime there are no repayments for you to make.

A lawsuit cash advance can provide you with a fast cash infusion if you are having trouble making ends meet or need some financial assistance to pay medical bills. However, the lawsuit funding company does not track what you use the money for – it is your money and you can use it for whatever you want.

There are also no credit checks made – this is because the lawsuit cash advance is issued on the strength of your case and nothing else. If you have a great case the company will issue up to 10% of your expected settlement. So if your case is valued at $100,000 you can expect to receive up to $10,000 today.
